code meaning

At any time after the dealing of a patent the patentee may apply to the comptroller for the patent to be endorsed "licence of right". When the patent is so endorsed it secures the advantage that renewal fees are reduced by a half. The patentee retains the grant on the following conditions; any person has a right to a licence under the patent; an existing licensee may exchange his licence for another on terms which may be settled by the comptroller; restrictions are imposed on the penalties which may be imposed on an infringer who agrees to take out a licence on terms which may be settled by the comptroller. Any patents of addition must be endorsed also. An endorsement is advertised in the Official Gazette.
